

I'm writing about the proposal to charge higher fees to take off and land during peak use hours. You should consider increased management of air traffic by limiting the number of flights during 'rush' hours instead of allowing airlines to over schedule. Competition is great to reduce prices, but the cost of waiting to take off, in effect, also adds to the cost. Thanks.