

You should expect on time service when you purchase an airline ticket. If the departure is delayed, the consumer should be compensated. To increase airfares to secure a promise already made by the transaction is a poor business and a tremendous disservice to consumers.