

The new hours of service will just continue the tradition of cheating on log books because, in all practicality, they are unworkable. There are not enough parking spaces, they don't take into account human behavior, and they are just downright dumb.

Pretend I'm 23 years old and last night I met the love of my life. You are telling me that I dare not stop for a nap after I have been up all night because that would violate your law. Think about it. Remember how you behaved when you were 23? Do you think that legislation is going to change human behavior?

I don't mean to be offensive but you folks make it so painfully obvious that you are completely out of touch with the realities truckers face.
